Mineral and Fossil Gallery

These fossil pine cones are from the species Araucaria. they come from the petrified forest in southern Patagonia, known as Bosque Petrificado Cerro Caudrado, which is considered to be one of the most spectacular fossil beds in Argentina. These particular fossil cones come from large trees similar in size to the Redwoods of the United States. Some of the living species today exist in Australia and Brazil and have been known to grow to heights of 50 meters or more.
